Student Corner

We are pleased to introduce the "Student Corner" feature in the MACUL Journal, and we want your students to write for it!

With over 4,000 members, MACUL is one of the largest education technology organizations in the country. Published four times a year, the MACUL Journal is widely read by teachers, administrators, and others throughout the Midwest.

The "Student Corner" feature provides a great opportunity for your students to write to an authentic audience AND tell educators across the state about the great things they are doing with technology.

Please consider encouraging your students to submit an article. The topic is up to the student. Some suggestions are listed at the right. The article, submitted digitally, should not exceed 500 words (MS Word preferred). Include a brief description about the author (school, age, grade-level, possibly other interests). High-resolution pictures may be submitted with the article as separate jpeg files. Articles are selected for publication based on quality.

We believe it's important that MACUL Journal readers hear about students' experiences, opinions, and ideas regarding technology and learning.

Topic Suggestions:

- * Your favorite student project: how you did it and what you learned.
- * What it takes to win a student technology contest.
- * Why you like technology.
- * How you use computers at home.
- * How you help your teachers to use technology.
- * How you view technology differently than your parents.
- * What schools can do to improve the way students use technology.
- * The unique ways your teacher(s) use technology in the classroom.
